Open House London 2010

In September White Lodge participated in Open House London; a city-wide celebration of the capital's architecture. The weekend was extremely successful, as hundreds of visitors flocked to the Grade 1 listed Palladian villa, which was included in the Open House Programme for the first time. Visitors gained a special insight into White Lodge and The Royal Ballet School, as they were taken on a guided tour of selected fine rooms and enjoyed access to the gardens. The visit culminated with entry to White Lodge Museum & Ballet Resource Centre, where visitors could learn more about the former royal hunting lodge and the fascinating stories of previous inhabitants. Across the weekend we welcomed over 700 visitors, contributing to the busiest month at White Lodge Museum since opening.

New de Valois film

A new film about the Founder of The Royal Ballet School and Companies, Ninette de Valois, has been created by director Lynne Wake. Part-funded by White Lodge Museum & Ballet Resource Centre, Come Dance with Me was commissioned by Royal Opera House Collections for their current exhibition Invitation to the Ballet: Ninette de Valois and the Story of The Royal Ballet, at The Lowry. The film, set to narration of de Valois' own words, combines new interviews with key figures of British ballet, with footage of performances from the 1930s to the present day, illustrating de Valois' influence and legacy. The film will be shown in its entirety for the first time at the 2011 conference Ninette de Valois: Adventurous Traditionalist (further details overleaf), and will then be available to view at the Ballet Resource Centre.

Film Collection Consultancy

Last term we successfully applied to Film London for a Moving Image Preservation Audit of our Collections. Our moving image holdings are extensive, comprising over 1800 items dating from the 1950s. The collection contains many films specifically related to The Royal Ballet School and Companies, including classes and performances. A film consultant undertook a thorough audit of our film collection, and his detailed report of recommendations will enable us to better preserve and facilitate access to this significant material. We are beginning this process by digitising the entire collection, following which we can more easily view the films, and discover precisely what hidden gems are amongst the collection.

Recent acquisition

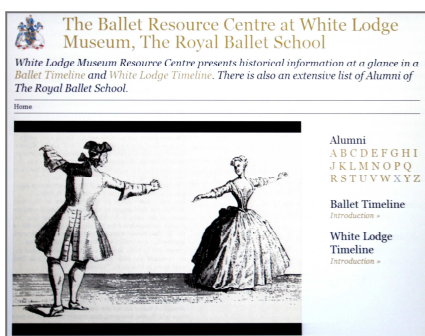

We are delighted to announce that The Royal Ballet School Collections recently acquired, on long-term loan, the collection of Nicolai Legat. Legat (1869-1937) was a Russian dancer and teacher—his pupils included Vaslav Nijinsky, Anna Pavlova and Ninette de Valois. The Legat Collection includes teaching notes, letters, a painting of Legat and a number of prints. Pictured is his caricature of balletmaster Marius Petipa. The Legat Collection has been kindly loaned by Mimi Legat, and is available for researchers to view by appointment.

Ballet Resource Centre news

New digital resources are now available to visitors at White Lodge Museum & Ballet Resource Centre. Detailed research into the histories of ballet and White Lodge underpins two illustrated electronic timelines, punctuated with biographies of key personalities. This resource will continue to develop into a comprehensive research facility.
